Of the seventh day of June a carload of new potatoes arrived in Chicago from Ca'fornia. They were fully five weeks ahead of the local crop and their appearance created quite an excitement, and the consignment brought fancy prices. We merely refer to the circumstance as indicating an opportunity for Arizona industry. New potatoes of large size and excellent quality were in the Arizona markets, raised by Arizona farmers, nearly a north earlier than the shipment above referred to. With such an advantage in the season of fancy prices for our products there is no good reason for Arizona farmers to wrestle with poverty .- Enterprise.
